I totally agree with the first person that personally addressed the Commission on “items not on the agenda.” Why does it take so long for Enforcement to bring their findings to the Commission? Yes some complaints need a complete investigation, others for example a violation of Gov Code 1090, doesn’t need 2 years of investigating the culprits.

Some years ago the person that violated the law died before the issue came before the Commission. In an other complaint the District Attorney failed to do his job and impose “prison time” for one of the culprits that violated the law because the FPPC Enforcement was kicking the can down the road for so long the time the D.A had to enforce the law was gone.
